2009 congregational economic impact story

"Changes in charitable giving have long been linked to changes in the overall economy. Research indicates that charitable giving is associated with personal income, gross domestic product, and changes in investment returns. In general, during times of strong economic growth, giving tends to increase, and during times of slower economic growth, philanthropy continues by at a modest rate of growth. Finally, during economic downturns, giving generally declines, even after adjusting for inflation. .... In this study, we examine how congregations have been affected by and have responded to the current recession, First, we observe how congregations were impacted financially by the economic downturn. We then examine what congregations have done for their communities and congregants in response to the recession. Finally, we look at which congregations have fared better during these difficult times.” -- Intro.

"More than two-thirds of congregations in a new study on congregational finances in the current recession reported that their fundraising receipts increased or remained the same in the first half of 2009 compared to 2008, even as the recession was worsening. .... Almost 37 percent of congregations reported an increase in fundraising for the first half of 2009 over 2008. Another 34 percent of reported that fundraising receipts stayed the same between 2008 and the first half of 2009. Nevertheless, nearly 30 percent experienced a decrease in giving 2009. This is 8.1 percentage points more than reported a decline in 2008". From Press release dated 27 October 2009 at: http://www.philanthropy.iupui.edu/LakeFamilyInstitute/economyGiving.aspx

"The Anglican Church of Canada and its Council of General Synod (CoGS) are preparing for the issue of the blessing of same-sex unions to come before General Synod in June of 2004. For this discussion to occur in the most helpful way, CoGS mandated the Faith, Worship and Ministry Committee (FWM) to 'consider ways in which the church may be prepared for the discussion'. This report profiles the process and results of a research and consultation project initiated by the Faith Worship and Ministry Committee to inform the planning and design of the General Synod conversation on the blessing of same-sex unions." .... "FWM determined, in large part, how the consultation should take place, and how the research information would be gathered, and contracted the consulting firm of Linda Graff and Associates Inc. to finalize the research design and implement the broad-based input process." .... "This report lays out the key findings of the consultations. It ends with a final discussion of key themes accompanied by eleven recommendations." -- Executive Summary, pp. iv, v.

Report presented to the Council of General Synod meeting 4-7 March 2004.

"This collection of addresses is meant to be a contribution to the ongoing discussion about Christian faith, human sexuality and specifically the blessing of same sex unions in the Anglican Church of Canada. It is also meant to be an invitation to enter into dialogue as a Christian people. .... Dialogue, however, differs greatly from discussion or debate. The word 'discussion' like the words 'percussion' and 'concussion' has a root meaning 'to shake apart'. It is the activity of breaking down or segmenting an issue in more and more detail. It differs from 'debate' which at its roots means 'to beat down'. In debates we seek to persuade or to convince another and to do so often by demolishing another's position if not their person! .... What that means is that for Christians dialogue is first and foremost an encounter between members of one Body who meet with, and in, and through Christ." -- Introduction.

"At the time of the dialogue series, Bishop Privett was Rector of the Parish of Christ Church, Edmonton and instigated the series to help his parishioners to consider an issue that has created dissension within the Anglican Communion, in Canada and globally. He was subsequently elected Bishop of Kootenay and took up his new post on September 1, 2005". -- p. xi.

"The 'Episcopal Identity Project' is a large-scale study of identity, emotion and wellness in the Episcopal Church. Funded in part by the College for Bishops and CREDO Institute, Inc., the research is being conducted by three professors whose interests are in the life and health of organizations and organizational members .... It struck the group that the Church was at an opportune moment for an in-depth study of its identity. They agreed that key to the success of the study would be collecting data from a multitude of perspectives, using a variety of research methods, and conducting the study over time. The researchers envisioned that a comprehensive study of Episcopal identity could greatly benefit the Church now, as well as provide a benchmark for the future, when the Church might step back and take stock again. .... To ensure that results from the academic study would be informative and relevant to the Church, The Rev. David T. Gortner .... was commissioned .... to work with the 'Episcopal Identity Project' researchers to produce this report. Dr. Gortner, with the three primary researchers, conducted extensive analysis of the quantitative survey data .... to produce the four-tiered classification of 23 Episcopal identity themes. Illustrative quotations were selected from their qualitative interviews to provide rich descriptions of how diverse samples of Episcopalians talked about these concepts of identity 'in their own words'. Dr. Gortner thus served as primary author and quantitative analyst for the report, with supportive contributions from the primary researchers". -- Appendix A, pp. 103, 107.

At head of title: In the Supreme Court of British Columbia.

"[1] These two actions concern disputes over church property. They have been combined for trial. [2] The plaintiffs are 22 in number. They are Anglican clergy and lay leaders from four incorporated parishes geographically situated in the Diocese of New Westminster (the "Diocese"). The plaintiffs are also trustees of their respective parish corporations, and bring the current proceedings in that capacity. [3] The defendants are the Anglican Synod of the Diocese of New Westminster (the "Diocesan Synod") and Michael Ingham, the current Bishop of the Diocese. [4] These proceedings arise from Bishop Ingham's decision in June 2002 to accept the recommendation of the Diocesan Synod that he authorize a rite for the blessing of same-sex unions. The plaintiffs view this as an abandonment of Christian Scripture, and their respective congregations have left the Diocese as a consequence. They contend that church properties in their four parishes are held pursuant to a trust for "historical, orthodox, Anglican doctrine and practice", and that the blessing of same-sex unions is inconsistent with such doctrine and practice. Accordingly the plaintiffs seek to have the church properties turned over to their congregations pursuant to the exercise of this Court's inherent jurisdiction over trusts and charities. [5] The defendants counterclaim for a declaration that the plaintiffs are not entitled to possession or control of the properties in question, and other ancillary relief. [6] If the plaintiffs are not successful in the main part of their action, it will be necessary to consider a discrete dispute over a bequest by the late Daphne Wai-Chan Chun to the Church of the Good Shepherd". -- Intro., p. 4.

"Following the decision of the [Inter-Anglican Theological and Doctrinal] Commission in September 2001, the Primates and Provincial Secretaries of the Anglican Communion were circularised, outlining the process that was envisaged. In January [2002] every diocesan bishop and, as far as could be established, all Anglican theological colleges in the Communion were sent the four agreed 'key' questions: When we speak of the Anglican Communion, what do we mean by the word `communion' ? -- What is it that makes some disputes so crucial that failure to resolve them threatens a break in communion ? -- In what ways are Christian teachings about moral behaviour integral to the maintenance of `communion' ? -- How far does 'The Virginia Report' meet the relevant situations that have arisen in the Anglican Communion since its publication ?" -- Preamble, p. 3.
A total of only 96 responses were received "(59 from dioceses, 19 colleges, 18 individuals)" from the 846 bishops and 327 colleges who were contacted. Preamble, p. 4.
