"Liturgy for a New Century" is a sequel to 'Towards Liturgy 2000', published by SPCK in July 1989. ... [It] is not only a sequel, but also a response. Its authors have tried to listen to the emerging debate, and so have identified some new areas and particular services where people are seeking enrichment. In this series of essays, alongside the particular - - eucharistic prayers, for instance -- we have explored wider issues that will affect every section of a service book -- ecumenism and evangelism, for instance." -- Preface.

"[By] The Church of England Liturgical Commission".
Includes bibliographical references.

"The Liturgical Commission presents its first instalment of texts and services in 'language that is alive in contemporary society'. Included are modern versions of the Lord's Prayer, Gloria in Excelsis, the Creeds, Te Deum, and the Gospel Canticles, with introductions setting out the reasons for the new versions and notes in explanation of the text chosen by the Commission. Entirely different versions of the Canticles have been prepared for congregational singing; the verse translations are by the Poet Laureate C. Day Lewis, and the musical settings by Alan Ridout. Finally, the Second Series Baptism, Confirmation, and Holy Communion services are issued in modern English. While these are intended for discussion only and not for experimental use, many members of the Church will study them with interest, since they may well influence liturgical changes when the period of experiment with the Second Series of Alternative Services comes to an end." -- back cover.

The Book of Common Prayer runs like a golden thread through the history of the Church of England and the worldwide Anglican Communion. [This book] is the first comprehensive guide to the original 'Book of Common Prayer and its numerous descendants throughout the world. It shows how a seminal text for Christian worship and devotion has inspired a varied family of religious resources that have had an influence far beyond their use in the churches of a single tradition. The Guide is unique: In it experts from every part of the world and every part of Anglicanism, as well as from the Lutheran, Roman Catholic, Methodist, and Unitarian traditions, provide an unparalleled examination of 'The Book of Common Prayer'. .... this volume describes how Anglican churches at all points of the compass have developed their own Prayer Books and adapted the classic Anglican liturgies to their diverse local cultures. In the dozens of editions now in use throughout the world, the same central texts -- Daily Prayers, the Eucharist, Marriage and Funerals, and many others -- resemble each other, and yet differ from each other in interesting ways. A brief look at the future of 'electronic Prayer Books' offers a glimpse at how this story of development and adaptation may continue in the Information Age". -- inside front dust jacket.

"Edited by Michael Perham".

Includes bibliographical references.

"The legal life of the Alternative Service Book ends in the year 2000, and few observers expect it to continue unamended beyond that time. What will take its place? In [this book] nine leading liturgists argue that a completely fresh approach is needed in several areas, including the lectionary, the eucharistic prayers, the daily offices, rites of initiation and funeral rites. A new solution to the question of the use of traditional or modern language in the liturgy is proposed, and a separate chapter examines the issue of inclusive language". -- back cover.
